Protect Your Community

If you’re like most people and already use the internet and social media every day, ESFI has various ways you can engage with us and encourage your friends to do so as well. Education is the key to protecting your community from preventable electrical fires, injuries and fatalities. Knowledge IS power, but often people don’t know the subjects in which they are lacking. Together we can help keep others safe.

- Learn new electrical safety tips and information through our status updates.
- Share our statuses or something you’ve learned so friends in your network stay safe.
- Encourage your friends to connect with us.
- Engage with other safety-minded people.
- Share with us your electrical safety activities and successes.

Help kids learn about electrical safety:

- Watch entertaining, kid-friendly videos featuring ESFI’s mascot, P.I. Plug.
- Send free e-cards with electrical safety reminders to loved ones.
- Encourage children to play free interactive games that teach electrical safety.
- Free activities for teachers and parents to reinforce electrical safety topics.

Above and Beyond

Print out copies of this magazine and request permission to leave it in the waiting room of doctor’s offices or hair salons in your area.

Encourage daycare providers to use our free teaching activities.

Contact your local newspaper and encourage them to devote a story to National Electrical Safety Month and its mission.

Include a post about National Electrical Safety Month in your town, neighborhood, community center or church newsletter.